Charleston Peninsula

The population of the Charleston Peninsula decreased by more than 3,000 people, or 9 percent, during the 1990's. The population declined from 36,540 people in 1990 to 33,318 people in 2000.

The over 18 population increased from 80 percent of the total population in 1990 to 83 percent of the total population in 2000, which represents the highest percent of population over 18 of the Charleston County planning areas in 2000. Despite of this increase however, there was a 5 percent decline in the total number of persons over the age of 18.

The White population of the Charleston Peninsula increased by more than 6 percent during the 1990's while the African American population declined significantly, by almost 23 percent. The proportion of White residents to African American residents was 43 percent to 56 percent in 1990. In 2000, that proportion shifted to 50 percent White to 48 percent African American. The "Other" population almost doubled in size.
